Is it a bird? No, it really is a Plane!

If anyone has driven past the front of the Selsey Arms in Coolham recently you may have noticed a new project underway.

Landlords Belinda Grover and Kenny Easton have paid special attention to the history of Coolham and the pub since taking over as landlords in 2018. For those who don't know, Coolham was the location of an Advanced Landing Ground used in WW2 to support the D-Day landings.

The grounds were in operation between April 1944 to January 1945 and would have seen mainly Polish and British airmen camped ready for action, the Selsey Arms pub being their local. Over the last couple of years, Kenny and Belinda have introduced a number of renovations to the pub, paying particular attention to this historical significance.

When lockdown was announced, Kenny turned his attention to his latest project – building a full-scale model of a Vickers Supermarine Spitfire (MK IX), complete with invasion stripes!

To complete the project, he will be inviting his locals to come along to sign the plane, observing social distancing of course and creating a new piece of history for Coolham – watch this space!
